

Northwestern Mutual Grants More Than $150,000 to Camps Nationwide for Children Affected by Childhood Cancer

Three camps receive $20,000 grand prize grants to provide life-changing experiences for children affected by cancer

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 11, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- Northwestern Mutual, through its Foundation, today announced that it would grant more than $150,000 through its national contest to support nonprofit camps that serve cancer patients and their families. Since 2012, Northwestern Mutual's Childhood Cancer Program has been committed to funding research and providing help for families during treatment, as well as supporting survivors and their families as they continue to live their lives beyond cancer.

Northwestern Mutual's camp-themed float in the 129th Rose Parade®, "Letting Kids Be Kids," featured three childhood cancer survivors who each attended summer camp and it played an important role in their treatment journeys, helping them cope and feel more carefree. In celebration of the float and riders featured in the parade, the Northwestern Mutual Foundation hosted a nationwide contest through which the public could vote for their favorite of 10 pre-selected childhood cancer summer camps. These camps were selected based on their level of service to children and families affected by childhood cancer as well as the number of years in existence.

"Summer camp provides a memorable experience for any child, and it takes on an incredible importance for kids whose lives are upended by childhood cancer," said Eric Christophersen, president of the Northwestern Mutual Foundation. "By recognizing the positive role summer camps play in their treatment journeys, we hope to increase awareness of and funding for these important programs. We're proud to support organizations making a difference for families affected by this terrible disease."

Of the 10 camps selected for the contest, Periwinkle Day Camp, Camp Ronald McDonald for Good Times and Camp Good Days and Special Times received the most votes and will each receive a $20,000 grant. The grant awards will be used to provide new experiences for campers, including retreats, expanded educational programming and recreational activities, and to make these opportunities available to even more families. The grant awards will provide future campers with invaluable experiences that can help restore the sense of childhood that is often lost during and following treatment.

The seven remaining finalist camps will each receive a $5,000 grant:

Camp Sunshine, Inc. in Casco, ME

Camp Rainbow in Chesterfield, MO

Camp Mak-A-Dream in Missoula, MT

Cincinnati Children's Camp NJoyItAll in Cincinnati, OH

Ronald McDonald Camp in Philadelphia, PA

Camp Goodtimes in Seattle, WA

Camp One Step in Williams Bay, WI

The contest was open to camps nationwide that support children and families affected by childhood cancer. In total, Northwestern Mutual received applications from more than 40 organizations. To recognize the impact of each respective camp, each was awarded a $1,500 grant.
