

Northwestern Mutual Continues Its Commitment to Improving Financial Confidence and Understanding Among Diverse Communities

MILWAUKEE, April 27, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- April is Celebrate Diversity Month, a time to reflect on and honor our many differences and similarities. Northwestern Mutual joins the celebration in April, and throughout the year, by offering insights into the cultural values that shape the unique financial goals of diverse audiences, and by reaffirming its commitment to improving their financial confidence for a brighter future.

Research* conducted by Northwestern Mutual reveals a gap between what multicultural audiences believe they need to be financially secure and what the broader financial services industry offers.

Key insights from Northwestern Mutual research include:

African Americans: Seven out of 10 African Americans do not have a financial plan, and only 1 in 5 have set financial goals. They have big dreams for their futures and are eager for opportunities to expand their financial educations.

Hispanics: More than half of Hispanics mistakenly believe there is a financial minimum that precludes them from working with a financial professional. Hispanics overwhelmingly believe they can achieve financial success, but often don't know where or how to start.

Asian Americans: Despite high levels of personal and professional success, Asian Americans are often their harshest critics when evaluating success in their lives and careers. One quarter of Asian Americans in their 40s have not set any financial goals at all and only 1 in 3 has a written financial plan.

LGBT Individuals: LGBT adults lack a sense of empowerment when it comes to controlling their financial destinies, and tend to put more emphasis on the "here and now" and earning a high income than on their retirement. LGBT adults define living debt-free as the number one marker of financial success.

"Northwestern Mutual recognizes the unique financial planning challenges facing diverse communities, which is why we remain steadfast in our efforts to increase the level of financial confidence and understanding for these individuals through programs that provide financial empowerment and education," said Raymone Jackson, director of diversity and inclusion for Northwestern Mutual.

Northwestern Mutual proudly supports organizations that advance professional and educational opportunities and increase financial literacy for multicultural audiences in the U.S., including the American Association of Latino Professionals in America; the National Black MBA Association; and the national "I Am Latino In America" tour hosted by Soledad O'Brien, a multi-city event with a goal of amplifying the Latino voice on critical community issues. The company also supports financial literacy programs such as "Make a Difference Wisconsin" in Milwaukee, where the company has had its headquarters for nearly 160 years.

"We are very passionate about sponsoring organizations that have a direct and positive impact on the financial success of multicultural communities across the country," said Jackson. "Not only are we able to provide financial resource tools to individuals but also work to attract the best and brightest talent to have our workforce reflect the communities we serve."

The company has received numerous accolades for its commitment to diversity, including being named one of Diversity Magazine's "Top 100 Employers" and being recognized by Equal Opportunity Magazine as one of the Top 50 employers in the country for providing a positive working environment for minority groups.
