

Northwestern Mutual Celebrates Pride Month by Empowering LGBT Individuals and Families to Take Charge of Their Financial Futures

MILWAUKEE, June 2, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- According to research* conducted by Northwestern Mutual, living debt-free is the number one marker of financial success for the vast majority of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) adults in the U.S., yet two in five say they aren't actively working toward their financial security. The findings underline the important role a long-term financial plan has in helping people achieve their financial goals.

In recognition of Pride Month this June, Northwestern Mutual is sharing insights and tips to help LGBT Americans take charge of their financial futures by starting with a personalized plan. Research shows the vast majority of people who have a long-term plan feel it leads to greater financial success.

"We believe everyone deserves financial security and the pursuit of the American Dream, however they define it," said Sandy Eichel, financial representative for Northwestern Mutual. "LGBT individuals and families have been a dynamic and valued part of the Northwestern Mutual family, and as the needs in this market continue to evolve, so do we."

The company has been recognized as a best place to work for LGBT equality for two consecutive years and earned a perfect score in the Human Rights Campaign's Corporate Equality Index survey. The survey rates companies on criteria such as domestic partner benefits, transgender-inclusive healthcare benefits, public commitment to LGBT equality, and non-discrimination workplace protections.

In recognition of Pride Month, and to help LGBT individuals on their financial journeys, Northwestern Mutual offers the following tips:
