

Northwestern Mutual Named A "Best Company To Sell For"

Company outpaces industry in Selling Power Magazine's 2016 career study for 14th consecutive year

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 25, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- Northwestern Mutual ranks first in the financial services industry and second overall among companies in Selling Power magazine's annual "50 Best Companies to Sell For" list. It also marks 14 consecutive years that Northwestern Mutual has been named among the top 50 companies.

"Northwestern Mutual is a preferred company to have a long and successful career with, and our high ranks over the past 14 years are a testament to the commitment our financial representatives have made to helping people meet their long-term financial goals," said Tim Gerend, senior vice president at Northwestern Mutual.

Gerend added that delivering financial security to people so they can live their lives with confidence – and without anxiety – is one of the most rewarding career paths a person can choose, especially with more and more people in need of professional financial guidance.

In fact, 68% of Americans say they do not have a trusted advisor who offers comprehensive lifetime financial planning, and nearly half of Americans do not even know where to get help as they move through life stages and need different financial solutions, according to Northwestern Mutual's 2016 Planning and Progress Study.

"The growing demand for financial planning is opening up career opportunities at companies like Northwestern Mutual. We take great pride in providing individuals interested in a financial services career with hands-on training and mentoring from some of the best financial planning professionals in the industry," said Gerend.

In compiling the 2016 rankings, Selling Power evaluated Northwestern Mutual's client growth, hiring and compensation figures, investment of time in training programs, and company recognition and reputation, which includes the company's commitment to community outreach and involvement.

In addition to leading the Selling Power rankings, Northwestern Mutual's training and development programs are consistently ranked as among the best in the United States by Training Magazine.
