The 2018 Rose Parade theme, Making A Difference, is a way to honor and celebrate all people in our communities who act in selfless, generous and kind ways to aid or benefit others without seeking reward or recognition. Northwestern Mutual's float, created by Fiesta Parade Floats, will celebrate the joy of being a child and the unforgettable experience of summer camp for children battling cancer. It will feature childhood cancer patients who rediscovered their happiness through camp experiences, and the champions and medical professionals who made their experiences – and those of countless other kids – possible.

"Every kid deserves to experience laughter, adventure and fun," said Eric Christophersen, president of the Northwestern Mutual Foundation. "This year's float is our way of recognizing and thanking the individuals and families who have inspired us and others in this fight."

The theme of Northwestern Mutual's 2018 Rose Parade float is "Letting Kids Be Kids," which celebrates a future in which children and families can move beyond the fears of cancer. The float will showcase stories from the following children and champions:

Chris Serrano, a 18-year-old from Los Angeles, was diagnosed at Children's Hospital Los Angeles with bilateral retinoblastoma as a toddler in 2001 and lost vision in both eyes. Chris now in remission and credits his experience at Camp Ronald McDonald for Good Times in Los Angeles with restoring his confidence and helping him discover who he is today.

their siblings during camp. She has attended the weeklong camp for 30 years, serving as the medical director for the last 25, and is also on the Board of Directors for The Periwinkle Foundation.
