Giving Gallery: Community in Process celebrates the 25th anniversary of the Northwestern Mutual Foundation, and its impact in collaboration with nonprofit partners. Since 1992, the Northwestern Mutual Foundation has given more than $320 million to community nonprofits, $87 million of which has been received by the nonprofit partners highlighted in the exhibit.

"At its core, this exhibit is a testament to the lives that have been changed through our Foundation's partnership with truly remarkable nonprofits," said Eric Christophersen, president, Northwestern Mutual Foundation. "The dedication of these organizations has improved the quality of life for thousands of people in our community; we want everyone to experience the power of this collective impact and have the opportunity to join us moving forward."

The exhibit consists of 26 pieces of original artwork, completed by 17 artists with Wisconsin ties. The artwork spans a variety of media, including an 8-foot pigeon sculpture representing the Milwaukee Public Museum, a serigraph print for Milwaukee Succeeds and a digital slideshow capturing personal journeys of children with cancer. Each artist was paired with one or more nonprofits to bring to life the stories of these organizations and their profound impact in collaboration with the Northwestern Mutual Foundation.

Locally, the Northwestern Mutual Foundation works to improve education, revitalize neighborhoods and enhance the quality of life in its hometown of Milwaukee. Nationally, the Foundation works to accelerate the search cures and support families affected by childhood cancer.

The gallery, at no cost to the public, will be open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Attendees will be encouraged to get involved with the organizations that move them personally through donations, volunteer opportunities and more.
