

S&P Global Ratings Points to Northwestern Mutual's Financial Profile, Market Leadership, Strong Brand and Highly Effective Distribution System in Affirming Financial Strength Ratings

S&P expects company to maintain its 'extremely strong competitive position' while sustaining 'extremely strong capital' and 'exceptional liquidity'

MILWAUKEE, June 17, 2019 /PRNewswire/ -- S&P Global Ratings ("S&P") affirmed Northwestern Mutual's AA+ financial strength rating, the highest rating awarded to any U.S. life insurer, in a recently released report. As noted in the report, Northwestern Mutual's credit profile is indicatively AAA, but S&P limits the company's rating to 'AA+' due to the "U.S. foreign and local currency credit ratings." S&P highlights several competitive strengths that form the basis of the rating decision, including the company's dominant market position in whole life insurance, its 'highly effective' financial professionals, and its excellent business and financial risk profiles. S&P also expects that Northwestern Mutual will "maintain its extremely strong competitive position while sustaining its extremely strong capital and exceptional liquidity" as part of its stable outlook for the Company.

"As a mutual company, we exist to serve our policyowners, and we do this in two important ways: by delivering on our promises when they need us most, and with exceptional product value evidenced in the form of dividends," said Todd Jones, vice president and controller. "To do so we need to be diligent in managing risk at all levels, while also seeking every opportunity to maximize value for our policyowners. These industry-leading, third-party ratings signal that we are doing so successfully and consistently."

Ratings rationale – key details

Specifically, the S&P report called out the following details supporting Northwestern Mutual's financial strength rating:

- A strong brand and a well-seasoned management team with a strategy that emphasizes long-term stability and strength, and a commitment to mutuality and policyholders
- Extremely strong competitive position in life insurance, stemming from its national presence and top market position
- An exclusive and highly effective distribution system, which has demonstrated increased productivity in recent years
- Excellent business risk profile and extremely strong financial risk profile, supported by its range of complementary products including term and universal life and disability income insurance, annuities and mutual funds, and long-term care insurance; along with its well-diversified managed investment portfolio
- Strong operating performance - bolstered by favorable underwriting results, excellent persistency, expense efficiency and long-term investment performance - allowing it to distribute "a meaningful amount of" dividends to policyholders
