INTRODUCTION

Over 12 million Americans are currently receiving paid long term care services in a variety of care settings and from a range of skilled and non-skilled care providers.<sup>1</sup> Long term care services, such as assistance with everyday activities of daily living like bathing, dressing, transferring into and out of a chair or bed, managing incontinence, or supervision for safety, and cognitive impairment are commonly needed as a result of an accident, illness and frailties associated with aging. Family and friends often provide a significant percentage of the care individuals receive, but it is often not enough to meet all the needs an individual may have, so families must also rely on paid care. Those with no family or friends to provide unpaid support must rely exclusively on paid care.

LTCG conducts this annual cost of care study to better inform long term care recipients, their families, insurers and agents who represent them as they plan for future care needs or evaluate the right policy to purchase. The 2021 LTCG Cost of Care Study examines the range of charges made and the average cost of long-term care services provided in the home, in an assisted living facility, in a nursing home and in an adult day care center. Regional, state, and national averages are included. LTCG's annual Cost of Care Study documents changing costs of care across all regions of the country and provider types.

Note: Long Term Care insurance policies vary greatly with respect to the providers and services they cover. Policyholders are cautioned to carefully review the terms and conditions of their policies with their insurance carriers to ensure they understand the types of providers covered.

METHODOLOGY

Data for the Cost of Care Study was collected from a representative sample of providers of long term care services that are part of the LTCG Unified Provider Database Program, representing a wide variety of provider types across the country. LTCG has a certification process facilitating the benefit and provider eligibility decisions for the more than 1.3 million insured lives under LTCG's administration. A comprehensive survey is conducted for each provider in the program, capturing data related to the cost of care, staffing, scope of medication administration services, record-keeping practices, type and extent of nursing services, and licensure. Cost of care data is collected annually from providers already in the program and from new providers added each year. Minimum, maximum and average costs of care are presented nationally, by state, by Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs) and Non-Metropolitan regions. Costs are reported by major relevant attributes within a provider type – e.g., private vs. semi-private rooms in a nursing home, type of assisted living facility unit – e.g., studio, 1-bedroom or 2-bedroom in an ALF or nursing home – e.g., type of home care provider, such as Home Health Aide, Registered Nurse, or Licensed Practical Nurse) – e.g., type of adult day care model, either social or medical model.

Each year, LTCG works to expand the reach and depth of data in our Cost of Care Study. In 2021, enhancements include:

- 25 additional MSA's for nursing homes, assisted living facilities and home care providers rate types.

Nursing Home Cost of Care Data

Cost of care information was obtained from a representative sample of 7,000 nursing homes drawn from the more than 23,000 nursing homes in our provider database. Specifically, within the MSAs and Non-Metropolitan regions reported, at least 10% of all licensed nursing homes were included in the cost of care analysis. Private pay rates for both semi-private and private rooms were obtained and most nursing homes in the sample report rates that are all-inclusive meaning that personal care, memory care and other services offered in addition to room and board are captured in the daily room rates. Data presented shows a minimum daily rate which represents the lowest cost facility in the area reported and a maximum daily rate which represents the costliest facility in that area. The average and median private pay rate for both semi-private and private rooms is also shown.

Assisted Living Facility Cost of Care Data

The popularity of Assisted Living Facilities (ALF) as an alternative to in-home or nursing home care is growing rapidly. For example, in a 2013 study, 45% of those needing long term care services received them in an ALF, compared with only 20% in 1996.<sup>2</sup> the range of services provided within the ALF has also expanded with many offering dedicated memory care units for those with moderate to severe cognitive impairment.

Cost of care information was obtained from a representative sample of 12,000 ALFs drawn from the more than 90,000 facilities in our database. Specifically, within the MSAs or Non-Metropolitan regions reported, at least 10% of all assisted living facilities were included in the cost of care analysis. Some ALFs, unlike nursing homes, have more complex pricing schedules based both on the size and type of living unit as well as on the amount and type of care and services provided. The data collected includes the monthly rates for a studio unit, a 1-bedroom and a 2-bedroom unit in the ALF. Providers were also surveyed with respect to the minimum and maximum charges for care and services available in the ALF to residents living in any of the unit types.

The data presented shows a minimum daily rate for each type of unit (studio, 1-bedroom and 2-bedroom) within the ALF. This minimum daily rate represents the lowest unit price in the area without additional care and services. The maximum daily rate reported for an area represents the maximum unit price of an ALF in that area, with the highest possible levels of care and service the facility provides included in the price. The average and median for each unit type represents the average and median unit price across facilities in the area along with additional charges associated with care and services.

Home Care Provider Cost of Care Data

Most people who need long term care prefer to receive care in their own home whenever possible. In-home care is provided by a wide variety of providers including licensed Home Health Care Agencies, Home Care Agencies and independent, privately hired providers. Home Care Agencies provide non-skilled care, while Home Health Care Agencies typically provide both skilled and non-skilled care. The Cost of Care Study includes cost data from home care providers, including Home Health Care Agencies and Home Care Agencies, reporting the hourly charges for care from a home health aide (HHA), as well as the hourly or per visit charges for registered nurse (RN) and licensed practical nurse (LPN). Most of the LTC provided at home is for personal care assistance from a home health aide, although care from a nurse may be required for skilled care tasks such as wound care and home infusion therapy. Cost of care information was obtained from a representative sample of 15,500 home care providers drawn from the more than 46,000 providers in LTCG's database. At least 10% of all agencies operating within these MSAs and Non-Metropolitan regions reported were included in the cost of care analysis. HHA rates are reported on an hourly basis. It is important to note, however, that many agencies require a minimum of a two to four-hour visit. The rates shown are also for weekday care. Hourly rates for weekends, holidays and evenings or overnight care are typically higher. The RN and LPN rates are reported on a per visit basis. The data presented shows minimum, maximum, average and median rates for each type of home care provider. The minimum represents the rates charged by the lowest cost provider in that region while the maximum represents the rates for the highest cost provider in the area.

Adult Day Care Cost of Care Data

Adult Day Care (ADC) is used as an alternative or supplement to in-home care for individuals who require care during the day but may have paid or family care available at home on weekends and evenings. It has the advantage of providing socialization and meals along with personal care, medication management and supervision services and it provides important respite for the family caregiver. Sometimes transportation to and from the center is included in the daily rate. Some ADC centers also have a sliding fee scale for individuals with more limited abilities to pay for care. Of all the formal LTC services, adult day care is used less often in part due to the more limited availability of this resource. Adult day care tends to be more prevalent in densely populated urban areas and is less available in rural parts of the country.

Cost of care information was obtained from a representative sample of 600 adult day care providers drawn from the more than 9,500 adult day care providers in LTCG's database. Daily rates are reported separately for the two models of adult day care, the social model and the medical model. The social model of adult day care focuses on socialization, meals and activities. The medical model, while providing socialization, meals and activities, also provides personal care assistance, medication administration and other supportive services.

Most ADC centers operate Monday through Friday and do not provide overnight care. Therefore, rates shown are daily rates for weekday care. Some people may attend daily while others may only attend on certain days of the week when in-home care is not available. The study reports the minimum, maximum, average and median rates for both the social and medical model ADC. The minimum represents the rate charged by the lowest cost provider in that area, while the maximum represents the cost at the highest cost facility in the area.

SELECTED FINDINGS

This section presents a summary of the major findings from the LTCG Cost of Care Study.

The U.S. national averages for a Home Health Aide rate experienced the largest average cost of care increase from 2020 to 2021. The smallest increase in U.S. national average cost of care was seen in the ALF 1 Bedroom Rate.

Rate Type	Percentage Increase/Decrease from 2020 to 2021
SNF Private	1.1%
SNF Semi-Private	1.3%
ALF 1 Bedroom	.5%
ALF 2 Bedroom	(2.7%)
ALF Studio	3.2%
Home Health Aide	5.6%
RN	(1.0%)
LPN	(6.5%)

**All data is represented utilizing the average rates*

The U.S. national average for care in a nursing home is $315/day for a private room and $276/day for a semi-private room. The ten states with the highest daily nursing home rates are shown in the table below:

DEFINITIONS

Adult Day Care (ADC)

This is care that is provided during the day at a community-based center for adults. ADCs serve people who need assistance or supervision during the day, which may include help with personal care and managing medications, and who typically have paid or unpaid services at home the balance of the day and night. The social model of Adult Day Care is a program that provides supervision and socialization through therapeutic group activities such as discussion groups, arts and crafts, games, music, and memory stimulation exercises. The medical model (sometimes called Adult Day Health Care) is also a day program designed for individuals that require medical or supportive care in addition to socialization. Those services may include nursing care, personal care assistance, and physical, occupational and other rehabilitative therapies.

Assisted Living Facility (ALF)

While the types and sizes of facilities vary (ranging from a small 6-bed home to a large apartment-style complex), this is a residential living arrangement that provides housing and related services, as well as individualized personal care and health services for those who need it. While some people choose to live in this type of a facility before they may need LTC services, many people choose an ALF when they first require some assistance with one or more activities of daily living, but do not require the more intense level of care provided in a nursing home. Services provided in an ALF include housing-related services such as laundry, meal preparation, socialization, transportation, personal care and medication administration assistance. Many ALFs also provide specialized memory care.

Home Care Provider

A general term that refers to any provider of long term care services delivered to persons in their home.

Home Health Care Agency

A licensed provider that offers a broad range of services delivered in the home, typically including some range of skilled nursing services, speech, occupational, physical and respiratory therapies, nutrition and medical services, administration of medication and personal care (help with ADLs). Some may also provide chore and homemaker services. Home health care can be provided by caregivers employed or under contract to a home health care agency. Caregivers may be home health aides, personal care assistants, homemakers, nurses or nurses' aides or therapists.

Home Care Agency

This type of home care provider typically provides personal care, chore and homemaker services, but does not provide skilled care services.

Home Health Aide (HHA)

A trained health care worker who may be licensed or certified and provides assistance to an individual in the home with personal care (such as bathing and dressing) and limited household duties (such as meal preparation and light housekeeping). The home health aide usually works for a home health care agency or home care agency as a regular employee, but some home health aides may provide in-home care as independent providers paid as an employee of the individual receiving care.

Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN)

A nurse who provides limited medical care to people who are sick, injured, in rehabilitation or disabled. They practice under the direction of a physician or registered nurse but may provide certain services as a privately hired caregiver. Typically, an LPN has completed two years of specialized training, passed a licensing exam and is required to fulfill continuing education requirements.

Nursing Home

A facility that provides 24-hour room and board, general nursing care and personal care assistance to those who are unable to take care of their daily living needs like bathing, dressing or using the toilet. Most nursing homes are licensed by the state in which they operate, and many are certified by Medicare and/or Medicaid. Individuals who need supervision and support due to a cognitive impairment may also receive care in a nursing home. A nursing home may be referred to as a Long-Term Care Facility or Convalescent Care Facility or a Skilled Nursing Facility. Some people receive short term care in a nursing home following a hospitalization for recuperation and rehabilitation, while others may remain in a nursing home for extended periods, sometimes for the balance of their life. Nursing homes are often the preferred site for long term care services when a person's needs exceed those that can be met at home or in an Assisted Living Facility.

Registered Nurse (RN)

A licensed person who provides and coordinates a range of medical services and typically work under the direction of a physician, but may practice independently, as well. RNs work in a wide variety of healthcare settings, including long term care facilities, physicians' offices and for home health care and home care agencies. The educational requirements for an RN include either a bachelor's degree in nursing, an associate degree in nursing or a diploma from an approved nursing program. RNs must also be licensed to practice in the state in which they are providing care and meet continuing education requirements.
