MILWAUKEE, April 13, 2012 /PRNewswire/ -- While most major grant makers in the U.S. plan to maintain or reduce charitable giving in 2012, Northwestern Mutual is growing its giving to $16.7 million in fiscal year 2012. The company expects to retain its position as the largest corporate foundation in the state of Wisconsin.

According to a March 2012 report published by The Chronicle of Philanthropy, approximately 70 percent of the nation's largest foundations will flatten or shrink charitable giving budgets this year. Running counter to the trend, Northwestern Mutual is growing its charitable giving by $1.3 million in fiscal year 2012, an 8.5 percent increase over fiscal year 2011.

"Northwestern Mutual's consistent commitment to giving back to the communities we serve is made possible by our judicious, long-term approach to financial management," says John Kordsmeier, president of the Northwestern Mutual Foundation. "Once again, we are growing our charitable giving while offering near-record policyowner dividends and maintaining the highest financial strength ratings awarded to any life insurer by all four of the major credit rating agencies."

In fiscal year 2010, Northwestern Mutual contributed almost $15 million to nonprofit organizations nationwide, 87 percent more than the second-largest Milwaukee-based corporate foundation according to the latest available data published by Marquette University[i].

The announcement comes as the leading financial security company celebrates the 20th anniversary of its Foundation's incorporation on April 13, 1992.

Northwestern Mutual Impact in Southeastern Wisconsin

Through its Foundation, Northwestern Mutual has given approximately $231 million to nonprofits nationwide since its inception in 1992; $135 million of those funds stayed in Wisconsin.
