The majority of funds will further strengthen Greater Milwaukee's most exceptional nonprofits, while a portion will power the company's Pediatric Cancer Program, which launched in July. In addition to financial support, Northwestern Mutual gives back through volunteering. More than 1,000 Northwestern Mutual employees donate a collective 21,000 hours each year to community volunteer efforts, including mentoring, serving on nonprofit boards and participating in charity drives.

"Our long-term goal is to harness the power of our employees, field force and Foundation to support kids across the street and across the country," said John Kordsmeier, president, Northwestern Mutual Foundation. "Northwestern Mutual will continue to be one of the largest corporate givers in the state of Wisconsin – and we'll continue to be a leading funder of UPAF and United Way of Greater Milwaukee."

The foundation of Northwestern Mutual's philanthropic focus in the Greater Milwaukee area will be rooted in three strategies:

Positioning Milwaukee as a destination – By supporting Greater Milwaukee's cultural attractions and events, the company will help make the city a great place to visit, work and live.

Providing opportunities for academic success – By working with area nonprofits, Northwestern Mutual is committing to improving the academic success of underserved children in Milwaukee by ensuring that all students have the opportunity to succeed and stay in school.

Building neighborhood capacity – By collaborating with local partners as well as the U.S. Department of Justice and its Building Neighborhood Capacity Program, the company will help strengthen three distressed Milwaukee neighborhoods: Amani, Metcalfe Park and Muskego Way. The goal is to build welcoming, safe and healthy neighborhoods with access to quality education.

"The strongest plans always begin with a firm foundation," said Kordsmeier. "We believe distressed Milwaukee neighborhoods can transform into stronger communities if residents, civic leaders, nonprofits and neighborhood businesses have the capacity and the tools to plan for the future."

On a national front, Northwestern Mutual's philanthropic focus on fighting pediatric cancer will continue, with funds allocated to research and support for families who are living with the challenges of these diseases.

"Childhood cancer is the leading cause of death by disease in children under 15 in the U.S., yet research to cure childhood cancer is still vastly and consistently under funded," Kordsmeier said. "Our giving will help strengthen the communities where we live and work, accelerate the search for a cure to childhood cancer and support kids and families fighting the disease."

As part of its Pediatric Cancer Program, Northwestern Mutual is teaming up with Alex's Lemonade Stand Foundation™ and Starlight Children's Foundation™, two leading nonprofits focused on fighting childhood cancer and helping families of children battling cancer.
