

Boston, MA, Resident Wins Northwestern Mutual NCAA® March Madness® Bracket Challenge

Winner heading to the 2014 NCAA Men's Final Four® in North Texas

MILWAUKEE, May 10, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- Boston, MA resident Jenn McDermott, 25, competed with more than 31,000 college basketball fans across the country to be crowned the champion of the 2013 Northwestern Mutual NCAA March Madness Bracket Challenge.

During the second year of the challenge, sports fans were asked to predict winning teams throughout the 2013 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. As the winner, McDermott receives a trip for two to the 2014 NCAA Men's Final Four® courtesy of Northwestern Mutual.

McDermott's Bracket Challenge Team Captain Tim Bettencourt – a financial representative with Northwestern Mutual – will also receive the same prize package.

"March Madness unites some of the most passionate fans across the country, in an electrifying atmosphere that is second to none," said Conrad York, vice president of marketing at Northwestern Mutual. "We congratulate Jenn on winning the bracket challenge and look forward to offering additional opportunities for fans to engage in the exciting world of college sports."

McDermott, a marketing manager in Boston, is the second consecutive female player from the East Coast to win the Northwestern Mutual NCAA March Madness Bracket Challenge. She grew up on a steady dose of sports thanks to her father – an admitted sports fanatic – who always did his best to share his love for competition with the rest of the family.

According to McDermott, while her father has already taken the liberty of claiming her second ticket to next year's Final Four, she jokingly added that she'll be accepting additional offers of good faith from family and friends over the next year to see if she can field a better deal.

"When I found out that I won the March Madness bracket contest, Tim and I both had an 'Are you kidding me?' moment," said McDermott. "I couldn't be more excited to make the trip next year and want to thank Northwestern Mutual for giving me the opportunity."
