The survey results were published in the June 2013 issue of Financial Planning and examined independent broker-dealers' total revenues, advisor production, fee-based product revenues, clients and accounts and other industry categories.

Unlike other companies, Northwestern Mutual offers a needs-based approach to financial security planning that includes life insurance, long-term care insurance, disability insurance, annuities, investment products and services and trust advisors.

"We help our clients achieve long-term financial security not just by growing and managing their assets, but by growing, managing and protecting their assets," said Eric Christophersen, Northwestern Mutual vice president of wealth management. "Our holistic approach that integrates risk management and wealth management clearly resonates with our clients in today's marketplace."

Northwestern Mutual's business model is attractive to thousands of professionals who have signed on with Northwestern Mutual as financial representatives. The company is in the midst of the largest recruiting effort in its 156-year history – on pace to recruit 5,500 financial representatives and financial representative interns.

"Our recruiting efforts continue at a record pace because we're seeing both a need and a demand nationwide for a tailored planning approach to asset protection, growth and savings solutions," said Christophersen.
