Milwaukee, WI, March 24, 2014 – This week Northwestern Mutual will serve as a presenting sponsor of the inaugural "Forbes Reinventing America Summit: Leading the Next Industrial Revolution," on March 26-28 at the J.W. Marriott in Chicago. The two-day invitation-only event will bring together leaders from business, academia and government for a non-partisan discussion about the role of innovation in the U.S. economy's recovery.

"We are honored to be a part of a great event with leaders from business, government and academia," said Karl Gouverneur, chief technology officer of Northwestern Mutual. "Like many of the companies represented at the Summit, Northwestern Mutual understands the need to reinvent through innovation. The key is to push the boundaries of creative thinking to address some of the most pressing issues facing our country today."

In addition to innovation, the Reinventing America Summit will explore topics including entrepreneurship, transportation, energy, the manufacturing and rail revolutions, the reinvention of finance and education, and keeping America competitive. On March 27, Gouverneur is presenting the Northwestern Mutual Excellence in Innovation award, an honor given to an individual and his or her firm that celebrates their work in pioneering new technologies or processes.

"Our biggest opportunity is innovation," said Gouverneur. "Whether it is providing new financial products or using information technology to deliver a distinctive planning process and client experience, innovation is a core component of our success. We look to constantly push different perspectives to arrive at the right answer for our company and our clients."

Beth Rodenhuis, senior vice president at Northwestern Mutual, will introduce the morning keynote discussion on March 27 called "The Promise of American Innovation." It features Steve Forbes interviewing Bill Ford from Ford Motor Company who will discuss his vision for the future of the country seen through the lens of the company that started and defined America's last industrial revolution.

In 2013, Northwestern Mutual was recognized as one of the top innovative users of technology in the U.S., according to the InformationWeek 500, an annual list recognizing companies' innovative use of information technology. Northwestern Mutual was ranked No. 129 on the list.
